HEAVEN IS GLAD

Hi! We are glad you are here. I am compelled to tell you about babyhood. I promise I won't say anything for a while . . . but indulge me for one more illustration. I have learned . . . now as a seasoned 9-month father, that Cana, my daughter, is a diaper wearer. She has three kinds of diapers: blowouts (in the back), can't-see-them-but-can-smell-them, and those that are not either one of those but are still in need of changing (if you know what I mean). I have learned in grown-up life, we all wear one of those diapers. Some of us have stuff that we can hide behind us and from the front you can't tell. Some of us have stuff that everyone can smell. Others, still, have stuff but you can't smell and you can't see it . . . even from the back. Here's the point. We all have diapers that need changing. So as we worship, the ground is level at the foot of the cross. I pray we all experience change today. Welcome.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GRANDDAUGHTERS & GOD

BY DWIGHT K. NELSON

I don't mind admitting that putting our little just-turned-one granddaughter Ella on a plane this past Sunday wasn't just about tears, but also about an ache in the heart that I really hadn't expected. After all, Karen and I knew this day would be coming sometime. Having our son Kirk and Chelsea just three miles up the road from us these past few years has been a parents' delightful bonus. But when Ella was born a year ago, we were joyfully ushered into the glorious dimension of grandparenthood. And what's not to like about having a precious little red-head granddaughter at your home nearly every week, while before your wondering eyes she grows and blossoms! To smother with love and kisses and prayers—isn't that why God invented grandparents?

So a few weeks ago, when Kirk accepted the invitation to head up physician recruiting at the 450 bed Salem Hospital (Oregon), the countdown to the inevitable began. But hey, isn't this what happens to everybody? I mean—life goes on—families can't stay close by forever—so not to worry—there's always Skype. If I had even subconsciously entertained the slightest notion of such thinking, trust me—it all vanished when it came time to say Good-bye Sunday afternoon at O'Hare.

When we pulled back into our driveway that evening and climbed the stairs to the living room, Ella's blanket was still on the floor, covered with her kaleidoscope of toys that were her favorites when she came to visit Papa and Grammie, and her empty high chair nearby—all of it corroborating evidence that the tears and the ache had not been imagined.

So where does it come from, this subterranean welling up of such poignant and too many times painful emotion when we're separated from those we love? If only we didn't become so attached to one another, there wouldn't have to be tears and an ache inside, would there? "I grieve for you, Jonathan my brother; you were very dear to me" (2 Samuel 1:26).

The truth is, such deep emotion is both transgenerational and transcultural. It is the human birthright, the embedded DNA of the divine Creator Himself. God is a Being questing for friends, in the words of Clark Rowland. Being fashioned in His image means that our own kaleidoscope of emotions can be traced back (or up) to the Eternal heart. The two-word brush-stroke on the canvass of Lazarus' death and resurrection still tells the truth about God: "Jesus wept" (John 11:35). Not only over the separation of death. But over the separation of rejection, loneliness, unrequited love and distance.

When our hearts ache, it is corroborating evidence that the Heart that called us into existence does, too. "In all our affliction, He is afflicted" (Isaiah 63:9). And because He is, the very presence of relational pain is itself the union of the divine with the human.

Tears and heartache—no matter their cause—flow from the sacred capacity to love so deeply it can actually hurt. Just like grandparents. Just like God. ■

ME? A SPIRITUAL MENTOR?

BY ANDREA JAKOBSONS

Paul is writing to his protégé Timothy. Paul, the spiritual mentor, is taking the time to leave Timothy, a young man, with instructions on how to fulfill the call that God has given him. My Evangelism and Leadership Class and I have been studying the two letters to Timothy for the past couple weeks. Thinking about the guidance that Paul offered Timothy, I can't help but look back at my own experiences with spiritual leaders. Although there were many people who influenced my walk with God, there is only one person I can think of who has ever written me a letter in order to encourage me in ministry and to offer guidance: my dad. I specifically remember the time when I was going on my first "solo" speaking engagement in Poland and my surprise when I opened up my Bible and in it was a hand-written letter from my dad. The letter encouraged me throughout the two-week experience to speak boldly for Christ and to trust God. I think of my dad as the greatest spiritual mentor I've ever had. But when I look at my life, the mentorship I have received from my dad and the mentorship I see in the letters of Paul, I can't help but wonder whether I have neglected "writing letters" to the youth? In fact, have we as an Adventist community neglected choosing protégés and "writing letters"? Sometimes I forget that I am not a youth anymore and that it is now my turn to mentor someone else. Perhaps it is because I hold the pedestal high and see Paul as someone much higher than I am, that I don't feel worthy of offering guidance to anyone else. So, what can I learn from Paul? What spiritual mentorship lessons are found in the letters to the young man Timothy?

Paul institutes a father-son relationship. Paul calls Timothy "son" (1 Timothy 1:2, 18) and treats him as family. He makes Timothy feel special because he loves him.

Paul encourages. He points out that Timothy demonstrates "genuine faith" (2 Timothy 1:5) and calls him a "man of God" (1 Timothy 6:11). It is obvious throughout the letter that Paul is proud of this young man and is not afraid to let him know that.

Paul instills confidence. He reiterates to Timothy that he has been given a gift and it should not be neglected (1 Timothy 4:14). Paul believed that Timothy was capable of being a leader despite his young age.

Paul challenges. He entreats Timothy to be an example in behavior and godliness (1 Timothy 4:12) and to give himself completely to the ministry and the Word of God (1 Timothy 4:15-16).

Paul gives practical advice. He instructs him how to handle different situations that may arise in the church by giving Timothy the right tools to use in order to know how to treat others and to solve problems (1 Timothy 2-5).

The points seem simple enough and yet just because something is simple doesn't mean they are put into action. I would like to challenge myself and you as well because if you are reading this you are probably old enough to be a mentor to someone else—to “write a letter” to a young person in your life through the following actions (hint: establish #1 before going to the other 4):

① THINK OF THEM AS FAMILY

Think of them as your son or daughter who you want to blossom into a powerful leader for Christ. Treat them as someone special to you.

② ENCOURAGE

“I am so proud of you!” “You are so great at...” “These are the qualities I admire in you...”

③ INSTILL CONFIDENCE

Demonstrate that you believe in them and reiterate that they have been given gifts from God to do His work.

④ CHALLENGE

Don't be afraid to encourage them to live godly lives and to spend time in His Word. Ask, “How are you doing with God?”

⑤ GIVE PRACTICAL ADVICE

Tell them how to handle situations and life from the Word of God. ■

WHAT IS LIFE?

“A man’s life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions” (Luke 12:15).

BY SHARON TERRELL

There’s a book in my library that provides some really good counsel about life. Written by Rick Rusaw and Eric Swanson, Living a Life on Loan: Finding Grace at the Intersections makes you think, and brings stewardship to a new level: my life is not mine; it’s God’s life on loan to me.

Have you thought of your life as on loan rather than as a life you own? I just celebrated another birthday; they seem to be coming more quickly these days! Another birthday brings a good opportunity to think about your life—or rather God’s life on loan to you. Rusaw and Swanson remind us that, “If you own something, you are free to give it away, sell it, or exchange it with whomever you choose. But if your life belongs to someone else and is on loan to you, that changes everything. Before you give your life (or even portions of it) away, you have to check with the Owner first.”

The Bible puts it this way, “The earth is the Lord’s, and everything in it, the world, and all who live in it” (Psalm 24:1). We belong to God. The life we live comes from Him alone. Paul reminds us, “You are not your own; you were bought at a price” (1 Corinthians 6:19, 20).

All of us have resources that come to us in the form of a loan from God. Whether we begin with more or less, we have some amount of “fortune” and can invest our fortune to accomplish God’s purposes both in our lives and in the lives of others. God can accomplish much with people who may have only meager resources but who have big hearts. The poor widow who gave her two small copper coins is commended for what she did with her “fortune”—loaned to her by God (Luke 21:1-4).

May God bless you as you check with the Owner of your life for His guidance in using your talents, your resources, your opportunities—all from God—to extend His grace to others.

(Rick Rusaw and Eric Swanson, Living a Life on Loan; Finding Grace at the Intersections; Cincinnati: Standard Publishing, 2006, page 12-13). ■

MUSIC ALIVE

CHARITY UNFAILING

Today’s Worship in Music explores “charity,” using the term in the context of the rendering in the KJV in First Corinthians 13. This is the middle one of three movements of a prospective Church Concerto for organ and orchestra, the others to be on Faith and Hope respectively. “Charity Unfailing” seeks to express something of the beauty, breadth, and dependability of God’s love. The music is at times lyrical, passionate, or serene.

The first melody returns in the passionate middle section as a primary basis for elaboration in the upper strings, then returns again in abbreviated form starting with the flute solo that begins the final section. Elsewhere in worship, today’s opening voluntary, composed by Charles “C. J.” Hall, is a fantasia on a nineteenth-century hymn by Franklin Belden. Dr. Hall was a faculty member in the AU Music Department from 1970-1991. ■

SOUP KITCHEN: A TESTIMONY

BY DANIEL J. DRAZEN

It is not the easiest thing to write a testimony article about working at the Benton Harbor Soup Kitchen.

It isn't that nothing happens there. On the contrary, we have more opportunity than we know how to handle. Where we once saw an average of 80 to 90 meals served, that number has crept upward to an average of 110 to 120 meals. We do our best to meet that need, sometimes pulling together leftovers from other groups when we run out of our own dishes.

WE SERVE THE PEOPLE WHO COME AND SOME OF THEM HAVE BECOME FAMILIAR FACES, BUT WE DON'T KNOW WHAT BROUGHT THEM TO THE SOUP KITCHEN IN THE FIRST PLACE...

No, the hard part is our inability to see clearly what is going on there. We can express it mathematically, breaking down the total into children and adult portions served; but that doesn't give us the whole picture.

That is not really a problem; after all, we were warned it would be that way. In the parable of the sheep and goats in Matthew 25, it is interesting to note that neither the saved nor the lost ever knew when it was that they did (or didn't) render service to Jesus as they were dealing with the people around them. We serve the people who come and some of them have become familiar faces, but we don't know what brought them to the Soup Kitchen in the first place, nor do we know what happens to them when they leave and we clean up the kitchen for the next group of volunteers. But God knows, and that should be sufficient. ■
