Stories in the Rearview Mirror

Ellen White and Why I Believe in the Ordination of Women

"IN THE BEGINNING, GOD..."

I was in a group of people, most of whom I had not met yet, and we had the task of brainstorming for the best strategies for kingdom growth. We began with prayer asking for divine wisdom, and challenged each other to think outside the box, and even discard the box altogether. To dream God-sized dreams is to consider contexts not realized, unlimited resources and fearlessness—and most importantly that only God's power can drive our mission. We were willing to go on the wild ride with Him.

Are you facing the unknown, unexpected chaos, or planning in your personal life, workplace or ministry? The Bible begins with "In the beginning God..." and this could be our reminder that we serve a creative God who's dream for us far exceeds our own. This morning, worshiping together is a good place to begin again and renew our vision of the God with outstretched arms and for whom nothing is impossible. (Jeremiah 32:17)

“GLOBAL FLIGHT FROM THE FAMILY”

That’s the headline of a Wall Street Journal piece last weekend, reporting the startling demise of the family as we know it, not only here in the United States but in Europe and Asia as well. “All around the world today, pre-existing family patterns are being upended by a revolutionary new force: the seemingly unstoppable quest for convenience by adults demanding ever-greater autonomy. . . . Thanks to this revolution, it is perhaps easier than ever before to free oneself from the burdens that would otherwise be imposed by spouses, children, relatives or significant others with whom one shares a hearth” (WSJ February 21-22, 2015, A11).

GOD SPEAKS A “LAST WORD” INTO THE CRISIS.

Consider these statistics:

- As of 2013 according to the Centers for Disease Control “40% of babies in the U.S. were born outside of marriage.”
- The Census Bureau for 2014 estimates that “27% of all children (and 22% of ‘White’ children) lived in a fatherless home.”
- A 2011 study reported “just 59% of all American children (and 65% of ‘Anglo’ or non-Hispanic white children) lived with married and biological parents as of 2009.”
- In Europe “the probability of marriage before age 50 has been plummeting for European women and men, while the chance for divorce for those who do marry has been soaring.”
- In Belgium “the likelihood of a first marriage for a woman of reproductive age is now down to 40%, and the likelihood of divorce is over 50%. This means that in Belgium the odds of getting married and staying married are under one in five.”

- In Europe “the proportion of childless 40-something women is one in five for Sweden and Switzerland, and one in four in Italy. In Berlin and in the German city-state of Hamburg, it’s nearly one in three.”

- “In Western Europe, nearly one home in three (32%) is already a one-person unit, while in autonomy-prizing Denmark the number exceeds 45%.”

- In Japan “about one-sixth of Japanese women in their mid-40s are still single, and about 30% of all women that age are childless. Twenty years hence 38% of all Japanese women in their mid-40s would be childless, and an even higher share—just over 50%—would never have grandchildren.”

- South Korea, Singapore, Hong Kong—the statistics mirror those above.

- Even in less affluent Muslim-majority societies “a flight from marriage within the Arab world is in process,” indicating “high levels of income and educational attainment are not preconditions for the new family revolution in those spots on the globe it hasn’t reached.”

And who will suffer the most in this social revolution? Our children and our aged. The WSJ report concludes: “Our world-wide flight from family constitutes a significant international victory for self-actualization over sacrifice, and might even be said to mark a new chapter in humanity’s conscious pursuit of happiness. But . . . it is far from clear that humanity is prepared to cope with the consequences of its impending family deficit, with [its] increasing independence [from] those traditionally most dependent on others—i.e., the young and the old” (emphasis supplied).

A global shift from sacrificing for the sake of others to caring only for one’s self. Must it come to this?

The Old Testament ends with this provocative prophecy: “See, I will send the prophet Elijah to you before that great and dreadful day of the LORD comes. He will turn the hearts of the parents to their children, and the hearts of the children to their parents” (Malachi 4:5-6). This prediction of a global movement to repair and restore the family clearly presupposes endtime forces bent on destroying the divine edenic ideal of the nuclear family. The statistics are sobering, but God speaks a “last word” into the crisis. Could you and I become part of that restorative “last word?” Could we by our compassion and proactive care for the young and aged be instrumental in God’s effort to save not only the most vulnerable, but to save the family itself? Clearly, we can’t just sit here and do nothing, can we? So what shall we do? ■

MEDIA IN THE NURSERY

BY LOIS LELLO-BURN

What is God's purpose for you and your children? Proverbs 22:6 says, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Train up is Hebrew for build up, lay the foundation or lay the groundwork for the future. These children are sacred gifts from God—a sacred stewardship temporarily entrusted to us.

WHAT DOES THE MEDIA HAVE TO DO WITH THE NURSERY?

Television still dominates kids' screen time. Of the average 2 hours of screen time a day that young children are exposed to, 50% is spent in front of TV. Three fourths of all children 0 to 8 years of age have access to mobile devices in the home. Their average daily use of mobile devices has tripled from 5 to 15 minutes a day. Thirty-eight percent of all kids under 2 years old are tech-savvy toddlers who use a mobile device.

"I've never seen a new medium take hold among little kids this fast," said Rideout, a senior adviser to Common Sense

Media, and director of more than 30 studies on children, media, and health. "As many little babies and one-year-olds have used smartphones or tablets today as all kids under eight had done just two years ago."

"This is quite an extraordinary shift for our young children. In the past we could measure and control exactly where, when, and how they were engaging with screens. Now, mobile devices follow our kids from room to room," said James Steyer, CEO and founder, Common Sense Media. "The media children consume can have a profound impact on their learning, social development, and behavior, and the only way to maximize the positive impact—and minimize the negative—is to have an accurate understanding of the role it plays in their lives."

HOW YOUNG IS TOO YOUNG TO WATCH TELEVISION?

Under the age of 2 we are not able to even decode the images that are seen on television. The light and color we see stimulate us but do not become meaningful content until the brain is more fully developed. Our brain develops in response to the environment that it needs to function in. As parents, we get to build the architecture of the child's brain.

There are three things that are important to build our children's brains. The first is bonding with human beings. Second, we need to learn to manipulate our physical environment. Third, we need to participate in open-ended problem-solving. All three of these tasks are short-circuited by media use under two. In this crucial time the brain triples in volume and trims thousands of pathways to allow focus above the background of environmental "noise."

How do we engage media in a thoughtful way for our youngest family members?

MESSAGE MATTERS

All media teaches so choose media that teaches the lessons you want your children to learn. Music and books are great for kids under 2 years old.

ENVIRONMENT MATTERS

Create environments for infants and toddlers with child-friendly MP3 player, radios and illustrated board & soft books. Media in the form of screens distracts babies and toddlers from meaningful manipulative play activities.

DEVELOPMENTAL STAGES MATTER

Support the intense rapid brain development by encouraging creative problem-solving play and opportunities to interact with your child's physical environments as she develops relationships with family and friends.

INFORMATION MATTERS

Research and review media yourself before sharing it. Look into family-friendly reviews to inform your decisions on media.

AMOUNT MATTERS

Spend time reading to your baby. The touch of your hand, sound of your voice and the texture of the pages will stimulate their development. Children below the age of 2 years are not to be exposed to any screen media. So limit screen time with the babies around.

Remember, "Children are a gift of the Lord, the Fruit of the womb is a reward. Like arrows in the hand of a warrior so are the children of one's youth." Psalms 127:3,4. ■

MUSIC ALIVE

SOMETHING NEW!

This column normally is devoted to music that will be in both the 9:00 AM and the 11:45 AM worship services. However, this week's Music Alive is about a new feature in the worship of Jehovah God at Pioneer—a new church choir! This week they will sing at the 9:00 AM service only, but on March 14 the choir will expand to sing in both the 9:00 AM and the 11:45 AM worship services. With the energetic, capable leadership of Jeannie Pedersen-Smith, what a sizable turnout of singers there has been! This new PMC Sanctuary Choir is scheduled to sing monthly through May, interweaving with the schedule of our schools' ensembles in PMC. There still is room for more singers—jean.pedersen.smith@gmail.com or 269.277.0488, voice or text for information. Praise the Lord with the voices! ■
