WE THREE KINGS OF ORIENT ARE

NEW HOPE, STRENGTH, & COURAGE

Life can be challenging at times for all of us, and the people who gather together here are no different as we deal with many of the same issues. We realize we are people who are in need and are not ashamed to admit it! But we come this Sabbath to meet in the presence of God, who knows our needs, hears our cries, feels our pain, and heals our wounds. As we worship, let us pray that He will open our eyes that we may behold and experience the blessings He has for us today. It is our prayer that we all may find new hope, new strength, and new courage.

BY DWIGHT K. NELSON

"Not even J. R. R. Tolkien could dream up rings as precious as these." So began the story of the Salvation Army red kettle outside Boston's North Station a couple weeks ago. The ringer hadn't noticed that one of the passers-by had dropped into the kettle a letter with two objects tucked inside. When the charity emptied the kettle late that night, they found the letter, from a widow. Recalling her late husband as an especially giving soul (particularly during the holidays), the anonymous widow donated both her diamond engagement ring and wedding band. The note asked that the two rings be sold and the proceeds used to buy toys for poor children. "I'm hoping there's someone out there who made lots of money this year and will buy the ring for 10 times its worth. After all, there's no price on love or the sentimental value of this ring. But money will help the kids," her note read.

Massachusetts Salvation Army Major David Davis later reported that the diamond ring itself was valued at $1,850. In keeping with the widow's wishes, the Salvation Army spread the word about the widow's gift and her desire. Soon multiple offers were made for the rings.

But the highest offer actually came from a former Salvation Army ringer. In fact she offered $21,000 for the two rings, more than ten times their worth! But as the Associated Press reported: "This heartwarming Christmas story gets even better: The anonymous woman redeeming the rings is also a widow, and she wants to return them to the woman who originally donated them" (South Bend Tribune 12-16-14). Why so generous an offer from the second widow? "I want to be involved in this because it's about the spirit of Christmas, the spirit of giving. My wish is that the rings can be returned to this woman who gave them up in memory of her husband for the sake of the children at Christmas."

As church official Davis put it, "One expression of love has inspired another grand gesture to help those in need during the holiday season. Because of these two amazing individuals, our Salvation Army officers, staff and individuals will be able to extend our outreach to the many families and children in need. We are dedicated to fulfilling the sentiment behind these two heartfelt donations."

Talk about a feel-good story for Christmas! Two widows, two sacrificial gifts, all because of one Child long ago who made the greatest sacrifice of all. Somewhere it is written, "Freely you have received—freely give." They are the words of the Child grown up to be Savior and Lord of the rings and every other gift that shall be given in His name. ■

"FREELY YOU HAVE RECEIVED—FREELY GIVE."

I WON'T BE HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

BY KEVIN SPENCER WILSON

Christmas is painful sometimes. This is the third year that I have spent Christmas away from my home. And trust me, it doesn't get better.

A significant part of the problem is because I haven't been able to identify what "home" really is.

Home is where the heart is, people say. But what if my heart is in many different places? Does that mean I have multiple homes?

I am what they call a Third-Culture Kid (TCK). In short, this means that during my 23-year excursion of this world, I've spent developmental periods of my life in multiple countries apart from my place of birth (which happens to be Sri Lanka, aka the most beautiful country in the world). Due to the high mobility shared by fellow TCK's across the globe, home is characterized by a state of intermittence—it is fluid and in a constant state of flux.

I am a case in point.

For the first 12 years of my life, home was the verdant city of Kandy in Sri Lanka. Then, till I was 19, the metropolis of Muscat in the Sultanate of Oman was home. Thanks to Uncle Sam and his provisional invite affectionately known as the "Green Card," home, since then, has been the United States. Over the span of the last 5 years, I've gypsied from Maryland to Michigan, to Beirut, Lebanon, and then back to Michigan.

Home, therefore, is not where my heart is. It is where my foot is. Home is everywhere. It is ubiquitous.

Christmas, unlike any other season, unabashedly and unapologetically reminds me of home. Recently, however, as I was reflecting on the Christmas story detailed in the Bible, I was refreshed to find that my sentiments regarding home found clarity and purpose in the birth of the ultimate TCK—Jesus Christ.

God became flesh. Divinity was enshrouded in humanity. The One who knew no time was born into it. If there was anyone in history who knew the pains of being away from home it was Jesus. While families across the globe are reunited with their loved ones during this joyous season, the Reason for the season was separated from his family, not just during his birth but for the rest of his life. However, this separation was not a complete separation. Jesus, through his life, exemplified the life of a human being who was in constant communion to his Heavenly Father. Even though there was a physical separation, Jesus felt the closeness of his heavenly home emotionally, spiritually, and relationally.

At this time I can't help but remember the many families who have adopted me in like manner by giving a bed (or the couch) to sleep, food to eat, and a place to call home. The warmth and sense of belonging I have received in these places have undeniably alleviated the pain of distance. They have taught me that while I may be physically away from those places I call home, I am and forever will be connected to them in my heart.

I have had more than 10 addresses in the last 6 years. This Christmas I'm thankful for the many homes the Lord has provided for me during the course of my life. I truly have pieces of my heart in each of those places. I'm also thankful that even though I may be miles away from my family, I am but a prayer away from God. But above all, I thank God for the promise of a permanent home. A place that is not tampered by the vicissitudes of life nor the tyranny of time; a place to call my own. This Christmas I'm reminded that there is indeed such a place. A home where I will no longer be concerned with my next flight away. A home where I don't need to validate my identity. A home where I don't have to live out of my suitcase. A home of perpetual joy, light, and happiness. A home whose builder and maker is God.

I won't be home for Christmas.

For now. ■

Christmas Call

Dwight K. Nelson

PASTOR: On this Day in which we celebrate the birth of Christ Jesus, may you be welcomed and blessed.

PEOPLE: And may you be blessed.

PASTOR: Why have you come on this glorious Sabbath?

PEOPLE: We have come, like the shepherds and the wise men, to worship the Christ Child.

PASTOR: But He is not here—He is risen, ascended and soon to return.

PEOPLE: But we come to celebrate that the Infant of Bethlehem was and is our God, our Savior and our Lord.

PASTOR: Then like sages with gifts and shepherds with wonder,
let us come and adore Him.

PEOPLE: We have come to worship Him.

PASTOR: Then may He be glorified and may all be blessed this Christmas Sabbath.

Christmas Scripture

Matthew 2:1-2, 7-11 NIV • Lori & Duane Covrig

After Jesus was born in Bethlehem in Judea, during the time of King Herod, Magi from the east came to Jerusalem and asked, "Where is the one who has been born king of the Jews? We saw his star when it rose and have come to worship him."

Then Herod called the Magi secretly and found out from them the exact time the star had appeared. He sent them to Bethlehem and said, "Go and search carefully for the child. As soon as you find him, report to me, so that I too may go and worship him."

After they had heard the king, they went on their way, and the star they had seen when it rose went ahead of them until it stopped over the place where the child was. When they saw the star, they were overjoyed.

On coming to the house, they saw the child with his mother Mary, and they bowed down and worshiped him. Then they opened their treasures and presented him with gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh.

Adopt A Family for Christmas

It is time again to pay special attention to our families who may need help with meeting the needs (and some pleasures) of their children at Christmas time. You have been so generous in the past. Please choose to get involved and bring cheer and gladness again this Christmas. To choose a family, or to gather more info, call Katherine Smith at 269.471.1502.

I HEARD THE BELLS

BY KENNETH LOGAN

Civil-War strife struck close to home while its battles remained far afield, in the life of Massachusetts poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882). His teenaged son Charles enlisted in the Union Army, against his father's will. In March 1863, he was a second lieutenant. On November 27, "Charley" was wounded seriously in the battle of New Hope Church, Virginia. A bullet is said to have entered his left side and exited his right. An army surgeon warned the father/poet of the prospect of paralysis; by one account, he missed paralysis by less than an inch's deviation in the bullet's path. Charles' December 8 arrival home in Cambridge, Massachusetts, started a long process of home-town healing. One account has it that his poet-father wrote to a friend, "I have been through a great deal of trouble and anxiety."

Shortly before this injury to son Charles, the poet had in 1861 lost his wife to a domestic fire. He is said to have journaled, regarding Christmas 1862, "A 'merry Christmas' say the children, but that is no more for me."

It is against this background, then, of personal loss and wartime strife and suffering that Longfellow wrote (many accounts state in 1863) his famous poem that starts, "I heard the bells on Christmas day..." This poem is the basis for a new musical composition for today's worship service, based on portions of Longfellow's seven stanzas. While the poem as abridged is famous, a portion about Civil War cannon "thundering" in the South often is omitted. However, in this new composition the sequence of hopeful Christmas bells—war cannon thundering—personal despair—hope for peace and goodwill, is retained.

What is in the collective "soul" of the United States of America, and the world, this Christmas, a century and a half later? Are we not a nation, a globe, divided? Where is there strife, where despair, where hope? And what about personally, individually? How many will join Adventist poet Wayne Hooper to affirm coming peace and ultimate goodwill: "We have this hope that burns within our hearts, / Hope in the coming of the Lord"? ■

THANK YOU

BY JIM FORD

As you plan your gift giving and year-end financial contributions please remember “our own”—our young people who, along with their families, struggle to gain a Christian education. Through your generosity to Student Aid, there are currently nearly 90 students in Christian education who may not have been there without your help. Please help one of “our own” get to know God better. It may have an impact on eternity for them.

Here is a thank-you letter addressed to you from a grateful mother:

Dear PMC Family,

I would like to express my sincere gratitude for the financial assistance [Student Aid] you provide our family so that my daughter has the opportunity to receive a Christian Education at RMES. As a single mother with several children, it has been a struggle financially. However, it is my conviction that it is God’s desire that our children be taught by Christian teachers and with a curriculum that points to our Maker.

God has rewarded our commitment to Christian Education and thus far has provided a way.

My daughter is very blessed to belong to a church family that is not only concerned about having good Sabbath School classes, which she enjoys very much, and Pathfinder clubs, etc., but that understands the importance of Christian Education in their daily lives.

Once again, thank you for your generosity and may God continue to bless your ministry, the church as a whole, and our schools. ■

With much appreciation,
A mother
